Information Sharing in Practice
Striking the Right Balance Between Privacy and Safety and Wellbeing

- Do you understand when you can, can’t or must share information to keep people safe from harm?
- Have you ever been concerned about breaching the privacy of your client when discussing your concerns about them with other service providers?
- Would you like a simple process to follow so you know you are doing the right thing?

At times your organisation may be alerted to circumstances where an individual, family or group of people may be experiencing difficulties that place them at risk of harm or that pose a risk to the health, safety or wellbeing of others. When this happens, information may need to be sought from, or provided to another organisation so that services can be better coordinated to lessen threats to safety and wellbeing.

Organisations working with children, young people or adults can intervene earlier and more effectively by following the SA Information Sharing Guidelines for Promoting Safety and Wellbeing (ISG). The ISG are endorsed by the South Australian Government for implementation by state government agencies, NGOs and Local Government.

To hear about the ISG and understand what it means for you and your organisation, register for the ISG Info Session presented by Donna Mayhew, the SA Principal Advisor Information Sharing.
